Through the European Economic Area (EEA) Agreement, signed in the city of Oporto in May 1992, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway are partners, in the internal market, of the Member States of the European Union. As a way of promoting a continuous and balanced strengthening of the economic and trade relations, the parties of the EEA Agreement have established a Multiannual Financial Mechanism, known as the EEA Grants, through which Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway provide financial support to Member States of the European Union with the greatest deviations from the European average GDP per capita, in order to reduce the economic and social disparities in the European Economic Area and to strengthen the bilateral relations between beneficiary and donor countries.

For the period 2014-2021, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway, as donor States, have contributed with a total contribution of 2,800 M€ to 15 beneficiary countries, of which 102.7 M€ were allocated to Portugal's economic and social development.

PART I – Framework and nature of the Referential of Good Practices

Context

The Referential of Good Practices for Enhancing Child Participation in the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of the Child is one of the two final outputs of the bilateral initiative on “Enhancing the protection of the rights of the child in priority areas”. Totally financed by the Fund for Bilateral Relations of the EEA Grants, it involves Portugal and Norway, namely through the National Commission for the Promotion and the Protection of Children and Young People, as the Portuguese promoter of the Initiative, and the Agency for Child and Family Welfare of the City of Oslo, as the Norwegian partner.

The bilateral initiative was launched on July 2, 2019 at the Portuguese Assembly of the Republic, in Lisbon. Its public presentation was integrated in the opening session of the International Seminar “Reflecting upon child participation in public decision-making” and counted with the intervention of several international lecturers with vast experience in the promotion of the rights of the child.

The closing event of the initiative took place on December 16, 2020, in an online format, and counted with the participation of speakers from both countries, as well as from Eurochild. The recorded event is now available to the public.
Alongside this Referential of Good Practices or Enhancing Child Participation in the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of the Child, the Thematic Glossary of Child Protection Systems and the Promotion of Children Rights, focused on child participation in especially vulnerable contexts, is another output of the bilateral initiative at stake, both resulting from the same context and methodology and contributing to the same goals.

The selection of the area around which the Referential of Good Practices revolves was based on its relevance to ensure the right of children to participate, be heard, have their opinions appreciated and taken into account, access equal opportunities and have the fundamental principle of the best interest of the child taken as a primary consideration, in all policies and practices concerning child protection and the promotion of the rights of the child.

Goals

The main and most immediate common goal of both outputs of this bilateral initiative is to stimulate and support child participation, having in mind the need for implementing special support measures that are adequate to overcome constraints deriving from vulnerabilities and any possible limitation to the access of children to participation and full enjoyment of this right, on an equal opportunities basis, free from any discrimination stemming from the context or from the personal situation of the child. This goal is multifold. On one hand, it allows systems of protection and promotion of children and young people and all stakeholders to increase the potential for application of already existing policies, projects, practices and activities based on or involving child participation, both in Portugal and in Norway. On another hand, it allows further contribution and inspiration to other initiatives that may result from all knowledge and experiences shared during the elaboration of both products, as well as from their dissemination, which goes well beyond the closure of the initiative. The fact that the two products are available in digital format eases their distribution and the promotion of the debate among peers and anyone involved or interested in contributing to stimulate child participation on a regular and equal opportunities basis, in all areas of intervention – the fulfillment of children’s rights is an obligation of everyone and their scope encompasses all contexts of children’s life, directly or indirectly, from where they live, are cared and assisted to where they learn and play.

The Referential of Good Practices also aims specifically to compile practices that have been or are being implemented by Portuguese and Norwegian entities acting in the area of the promotion of rights and the protection of children, based on child participation or that involve it, and that have proven to yield good results, namely in facilitating and stimulating child participation in matters that respect them, as well as in ensuring children’s right to participate, to be heard and to have their opinions taken in consideration in all areas of life in society.

The good practices selected and included herein are meant to constitute a useful technical resource for professionals and for the civil society to stimulate and support child participation opportunities in full respect for children’s rights, keeping in mind the necessary special attention required by children belonging to vulnerable groups or with personal conditions of vulnerability. This resource can also be used in other areas where child participation is desirable and needs to be implemented, and may act as an inspiration to the development of other approaches and initiatives that involve child participation.

This collection of good practices is not exhaustive, but a basis that may be regularly updated with advances made in result of new challenges, knowledge and experiences that are prone to enrich it, since life itself and the learning process that occurs with the intervention of all stakeholders involved in the protection of children and in the promotion of their rights is a dynamic reality.

Other common goals of both outputs are to continue to: enrich the bilateral relations of Portugal and Norway through further exchanges of knowledge and practices; further increase the added-value that resulted from the team work developed along the process of the elaboration both materials, involving professionals working in child care and child protection, as well as children in both countries; to stimulate bilateral partnerships between Portugal and Norway in other areas of common interest, as well as to share with the international community their policies and practices to face current and future challenges, namely within the scope of the protection of children and of the promotion of their rights, including the right to participate - one of the most relevant ones, which has not yet been implemented nor attained all its reach.

Nature and methodology

The Referential of Good Practices is a technical tool, which was produced with the active involvement of all relevant professionals of child protection systems and all sectoral areas whose scope of action was considered enriching, as well as with the fundamental involvement and the participation of children.

Stakeholders came together in thematic workshops and parallel events held in Portugal and in Norway. Four members of the technical team of the bilateral initiative - two Portuguese and two Norwegian elements – participated in all workshops in which the most significant and relevant technical terms or expressions were identified as the base for a common approach, to be available to all stakeholders involved in promoting or facilitating child participation: in the public or private sector; in governmental and non-governmental organizations; internationally, nationally, regionally or at local level; on a political, professional or voluntary basis, in the best interests of the child.

Children in Portugal and in Norway participated in workshops and consultation processes along the elaboration of both products, either to be heard on child participation, on the difficulties felt regularly regarding the implementation of this practice in several contexts and on how they consider these constraints could be overcome. The contributions of children were mostly collected during a workshop with the participation of children and through the dissemination of an anonymous online questionnaire.

Both outputs of this bilateral initiative embody years of experience and knowledge acquired by the involved stakeholders in the area of child participation: Norway, holding a much longer experience in child participation, which became a regular practice; Portugal, which has taken several steps in the recent years towards that goal. Both experiences proved to be very enriching to one another and the outcomes of this initiative are expected to contribute to enlarge and deepen the debate among professionals and their commitment in creating and facilitating child participation - children’s voices are irreplaceable and very important aspects can be learned from them, in order to improve policies and practices in the protection of children and the promotion of their rights.

In methodological terms, it is important to mention the fact that child participation became a regular practice in Norway. As such, most of the activities organized by Norwegian entities to consult children are no longer identified as innovative or inspiring good practices since they occur on a common, regular basis, as a result of the enforcement of Norwegian legislation – the latter must be highlighted as an innovative and inspiring good practice itself though, previously to presenting good practices of both countries.

As a matter of fact, Norway introduced the concept of love in child care, as established through the Child Welfare Act1, which entered into force in Norway on the January 1, 1993, whose relevant sections were transcribed herein, along with explanatory notes by Julia Köhler-Olsen2 added on August 15, 2018, allowing for a deeper understanding of the Act’s content regarding the concept of love in child care and the need for regular consultation to children to guarantee the right of the child to participate.

It is noteworthy to mention that the purpose of the Child Welfare Act is described in its section 1-1 as “(...) (4). The law shall help ensure that children and young people meet with safety, love and understanding (...).” According to note 5, by Julia Köhler-Olsen, “(...) the purpose of meeting children and young people with confidence, love and understanding should highlight the value basis for child welfare work. Despite objections made in some consultation statements, the Ministry3 supports the view that child welfare services should provide children in child welfare care and empathy and recognize their need for safety and love. The Ministry also believes that safety, love and understanding are important elements of the purpose of the Child Welfare Act to help ensure that children receive the necessary care (...).

The concepts of safety, love and understanding are based on subjective feelings that can hardly be defined and that are not suitable to enforce. It is thus not easy to give the concepts a legal content and children are not given a right to experience safety, love and understanding, which can be enforced and tested.

That the incorporation of concepts without legal content are nevertheless incorporated into the provision of the purpose of the law is precisely its special feature. The provision shall express the objectives of the child welfare authorities and provide direction for the service’s priorities in general and for the interpretation of the individual legal provisions. The Ministry believes that this specific part of the purpose provision will have an important symbolic value and signal an expectation that employees of child welfare services meet children with safety, love and understanding”.

Explanatory notes (25 to 31) have also been added to Section 1-6 of the Norwegian Child Welfare Act, which addresses the child’s right to participate (25) and in which it is referred that “All children who are able to form their own views have the right to participate in all matters concerning the child under this law (26). The child shall receive sufficient and customized information (27) and has the right to freely express his or her views (28). The child shall be listened to, and the child’s views shall be emphasized in accordance with the age and maturity of the child (29). Children whose care has been taken over by child welfare services may be given the opportunity to bring a person of their special trust (30). The Ministry may, through regulations, provide further rules on participation and on the role and function of the trustee (31)."

In face of the aforementioned, note 25 refers that “This new provision shall highlight that children are entitled to participate in all matters concerning them under the Child Welfare Act, as opposed to previous child welfare laws which obliged the authorities to facilitate children’s participation. As the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child emphasizes in its General Comment No. 12 (2009), on the right of the child to be heard, the child is not obliged to participate or to speak (…). The reason behind it is to clarify that children have the right to be heard (…). It is assumed that the expression “right to complicity” entails the same nature as the right to be heard enshrined on Article 12 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. (…) The provision on participation has been moved from Chapter 4 to Chapter 1 of the Child Welfare Act to emphasize that the right to participate is applicable beyond occasions when measures are being chosen. The purpose of placing it in a new location is thus to clarify that the right to complicity is due in the application of the whole law”.

In note 26, Julia Köhler-Olsen explains that, “Following chapter 6.4 of the legislative proposal Prop. 169 L (2016-2017), the child’s independent right to participate shall apply consistently in all circumstances concerning the child, including beyond other legal provisions in which the child is given an explicit right to speak. The child will thus have the right to participate in all matters, including when choosing a foster home or institution, when assessing the interaction, preparation of measures plans (…). The obligation to allow the child to participate includes all agencies that perform tasks under the Child Welfare Act. The United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child states in paragraph 20 of its General Comment No. 12 (2009) that authorities shall not take into account the assumption that a child cannot form his or her own views and express them. On the contrary, the authorities shall assume that a child is able to form her or his own views and it should be acknowledged that she or he has the right to express them. The child should not have to prove that she or he is able to form his own views”.

Moreover, in note 27, Julia Köhler-Olsen clarifies that “In order to form their own views, every human being must have sufficient information. The right to participate thus also implies a right to obtain sufficient and customized information. Information is sufficient when the child learns what the case or situation is about, different options, various possible outcomes and consequences as of paragraph 25 of General Comment No. 12 (2009) of the United Nations Committee for the Rights of the Child. In addition, the child shall be informed that she or he is not obliged to speak (…). Customized information means that the information is provided in a way that is adapted to the age and maturity of the child, as to ensure that the child understands what the case or situation is about.”

According to note 28, “The Ministry highlights that the right of children to freely express their views means that the child can express herself or himself in other ways than just by speaking. Children should be able to express themselves verbally and non-verbally. The authorities shall also take into account the child’s ethnic, religious, cultural and linguistic backgrounds, including the language and culture of Sami children (…). The United Nations Committee for the Rights of the Child adds that the right of children to freely express their views requires the authorities to ensure that children can convey those views without pressure and can choose whether to express themselves or not. The child must also not be subject to manipulation. The meaning is precisely that the child can express her or his “own” views, as of paragraphs 22 and 23 of the General Comment no. 12 (2009)”.

Furthermore to the aforementioned, note 29 elucidates that “The Ministry points out that the emphasis on the child’s views in accordance with the child’s age and maturity also follows from Article 12 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (…). Paragraph 28 of the General Comment No. 12 (2009) indicates that only listening to the child is not sufficient. The child’s views must be taken into account and taken seriously when a child can form those views. The child’s age may not be decisive to the weight that will be given to the expressed views, but the level to which the child understands the case and the situation must be considered, as of paragraph 29 of the General Comment at stake. Maturity means the ability to understand and assess the implications in a particular case or situation and it must be assessed for each child individually. Furthermore, as of paragraph 29, it is important that a more thorough assessment of the maturity of the child is carried out, since the greater an outcome of a case is the more it directly affects the child’s life”.

Note 30 revolves around Article 4-1, whose second paragraph has been repealed: “The child may be given the opportunity to bring a person with her or him. The purpose behind this arrangement is twofold. First, a trustee, in the role of the child’s support person, will be able to give a child greater confidence in face of child welfare. Second, this trustee will be able to strengthen the child’s right to participate. The trustee will be able to give the child greater confidence in their meeting with child welfare services. It is important to emphasize that a trustee should be a supplementary element and not a substitute of the case manager nor of supervisory and control authorities (…). The wording of the provision shows that the opportunity to bring a trustee applies only where the child welfare service has taken over the care of the child. In this regard, the preparatory work stresses that this does not preclude the child welfare service from allowing the child to bring a particular trustee with her or him in other specific cases.

The role of the trustee is better regulated in (…) Regulation No. 697, of June 1, 2014, on participation and the trustee, in which it emerges that the trustee shall not have a separate formal role in the child protection case, but shall be a support for the child. This means that information to convey the trustee must be provided in accordance with the confidentiality rules pursuant to article 13 and following articles and in Section 6-7. Since the trustee will have access to sensitive personal information, the person concerned must be required to sign a non-disclosure agreement. For the safety of the child, the trustee must present a police certificate, as set forth in Section 6-10".

Finally, in note 31, Julia Köhler-Olsen underlines that "Pursuing the last subsection of the provision, the Ministry has established Regulation No. 697, of June 1, 2014 on participation and the trustee. The regulations cover, among other things, what child welfare services should inform the child about, the child welfare service’s duty to facilitate participation, as well as documentation regarding the child’s participation. Provisions concerning the trustee are referred to in note 30".

In what Portugal is concerned, the main legal acts on the protection of children and young people are:

i) The Act on the Protection of Children and Young People in Danger, which aims to promote the rights and the protection of children and young people in danger, in order to ensure their welfare and integral development. It encompasses amendments made over more than twenty years since the creation of a system to protect children and young people, in order to update the responses to emerging challenges and to extend its scope of intervention to the promotion of rights additionally to the protection of children; and the

ii) Educational Guardianship Law, which establishes the legal provisions for the application of educational guardianship measures to children, aged 12 to 16, in case of practice of facts legally qualified as a crime by the latter.

The current legal framework of the National Commission for the Promotion of the Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People was established by Decree-Law No. 159/2015, of August 10, amended by Decree-Law No. 139/2017, of November 10, and builds upon the inheritance of more than two decades of experience and lessons learned on protecting children in Portugal by its predecessor - the National Commission for the Protection of Children and Young People at Risk, created by Decree-Law No. 98/98, of April 18 -, broadening the latter’s scope and competences.

As a matter of fact, the work accomplished along the years by the National Commission for the Protection of Children and Young People at Risk - specifically focused on children and young people at risk – and the knowledge gathered from national and international approaches made it clear that, despite the notably increased need of the most vulnerable for protection, all children and young people must fully enjoy and exercise their human rights and be protected from experiencing human rights violations.

Furthermore, the need for the creation of a new structure also arose from the increasingly recognized relevance of the dimension of prevention in eradicating child victimization and revictimization, along with the importance of raising not only children’s awareness and increasing their empowerment regarding the exercise of their rights, but also of raising the awareness of all entities and of the civil society towards the need for implementing and respecting children’s rights.

November 2015 opened the floor to a new stage: the creation of the National Commission for the Promotion of the Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People, allowed the establishment of a mission encompassing a broader target and setting a larger scope of action and competences, reflecting the inclusion of all children and young people and the promotion of their rights alongside their own protection, as entailed in its current designation.

A new step forward was taken by Portugal through Resolution of the Council of Ministers No. 112/2020, of December 18, which approves the National Strategy on the Rights of the Child for the period 2021-2024. This Strategy is based on the definition of an integrated and comprehensive vision that aims to contribute to building the foundations of a new planning cycle for children and youth with an innovative approach in Portugal, namely by involving the participation of children. In this regard, it is noteworthy to highlight that the elaboration of the Strategy itself comprised a consultation with children, additionally to the regular public consultation process. This Strategy is based on five main pillars, one of which concerning child participation:

4 Lei de Proteção de Crianças e Jovens em Perigo, i.e., Law No. 147/99, of September 1, amended by Law No. 31/2003, of August 22, Law No. 142/2015, of September 8, Law No. 23/2017, of May 23 and Law No. 26/2018, of July 5.
5 The amendments also extended the possibility of providing protection to young people aged up to 25 years old whenever necessary, in case the young person has been previously subject to a protection measure whose application was decided by a local Commission for Protection of Children and Young People while the person wasaged below 18.

i) Promoting well-being and equal opportunities for all children and young people;

ii) Supporting families and parenting;

iii) Promoting access to information and participation for children and young people;

iv) Preventing and combating violence against children and young people; and

v) Promoting the production of tools and scientific knowledge to enhance a global vision of children and young people’s rights.

It is also noteworthy to highlight that additional relevant information on national initiatives and good practices of Portugal and Norway, provided by competent authorities, is available for consultation at the Education, Audiovisual and Culture Executive Agency (EACEA) website8.

The legacy of Norway and Portugal in the national legislation, policies and practices that promote and protect children’s rights was taken in consideration in the production of both outputs of this bilateral initiative – the Thematic Glossary and the Referential of Good Practices.

Moreover, relevant Conventions and Protocols of the United Nations and of the Council of Europe on human rights in general and on children’s rights in particular were also taken into account, alongside with recent documents published and events organized by international organizations, the European Union, non-governmental organizations around the topic of child participation, as well as with the interventions of children and young people as speakers in panels at European and international level.

This Referential of Good Practices is a first step in a work in progress – a never ending work, as this is a dynamic reality that keeps bringing new possibilities and challenges. It is expected to inspire good practices on child participation, also bearing in mind that those who are in a more vulnerable situation require special attention, as to have equal opportunities in accessing this right, which is a right of all children, irrespectively of their characteristics, belonging, conditions or context.

Children have the right to participate, to be heard and to have their opinions taken into account. Governments and societies have the obligation to ensure them the full enjoyment of that right on an equal opportunities basis and in the child’s best interests. Additionally to being a right, child participation is true richness for sustainable, balanced, healthy and ecological societies, where all live better lives, feel at home wherever they are, at any moment of their life. Child participation is a key-factor in the creation of child-friendly societies that are also humanity-friendly societies, since it contributes to overcoming hurdles emerging from vulnerabilities and to creating equal opportunities for all to be heard on a regular basis, a challenge to governments, societies and the children themselves.

PART II – Referential of Good Practices

Introductory note
This Referential of Good Practices presents entries in alphabetical order of the designation of each practice – in Portuguese and in English, accordingly with the language of each version – shared by Portuguese and Norwegian entities within the scope of this bilateral initiative. As described in Part I, these practices aim to ensure or facilitate activities that promote the participation of children, including vulnerable children - regardless of personal characteristics, conditions or contexts - , keeping in mind the potential need to meet special requirements to ensure the full enjoyment of the right of all children to participate, to be heard and to have their opinion respectfully taken in consideration, on an equal opportunities basis.

As previously mentioned, the fact that Norway has long been regularly implementing the practice of consulting children in all matters that concern them - including when preparing legislative initiatives or of other nature - may have contributed to a lower representation of Norwegian entities and practices in this Referential. As a matter of fact, Norwegian entities may have tended to be highly selective of the good practices shared, since participation of children is already a common action, and thus might have focused mainly on certain initiatives, projects or activities that are possibly new to each institution.

The fact that the participation of children is not yet a regular cross-cutting practice in Portugal may have weighted in the decision of the Portuguese entities to share good practices or initiatives involving the participation of children that are already in place and that were recognised as such by both parties to this bilateral initiative, based on the standard criteria of including practices that are in line with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and in full respect for the principles enshrined therein.

The Referential of Good Practices is not an academic study, but rather aims at standing as a useful resource for professionals and non-professionals acting within the scope of child protection and childcare and in the promotion of their rights, while inspiring the implementation of child participation practices all along the several stages of preparation of any kind of initiatives, actions or documents related to childhood and youth, knowing that these practices: fully respect children’s rights; are based on the principle of the child’s best interests and on the principle of equal opportunities; encompass the need for creating child-friendly environments, using child-friendly language and meeting the special needs of some children, including children in vulnerable conditions, in order to guarantee inclusive participation.

This Referential may also serve as an encouraging tool for entities to start threading the path of creating, launching or reinforcing the implementation of child participation practices in the development of initiatives, projects and activities in full respect for the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Likewise, the Referential at stake can also be used by entities that would like to access further information on any of the reported good practices, thus opening channels to present requests for supplementary technical details concerning methodologies, hurdles and how to overcome them, results, (un)expected potential and how the latter has been integrated.

Last but not least, this Referential of Good Practices may act as a tool to stimulate future knowledge and information exchange, hence continuing to foster bilateral cooperation between national entities of Portugal and Norway or even to become the base upon which to forge new partnerships around areas of common concern, in European and international contexts.

Beneficiaries
Children and young people, families, Local Commissions for the Protection of Children and Young People (CPCJ); professionals of entities with competences in matters of childhood and youth, who carry out intervention with families and civil society, in the geographical territories corresponding to North, Centre and NUTS II Alentejo

Short description
The Adélia Project – Support to Positive Parenting (Projeto Adélia de Apoio à Parentalidade Positiva) reflects the increasing investment in public policies that support positive parenting and the reinforced acknowledgement of parental responsibilities. As a policy measure aiming at building violence-free parenting and the promotion of parental behaviors that respect the best interests and the rights of the child, the Adélia Project contributes to the qualification of the national system for the protection of children and young people – to which the CPCJ are central -, as well as to the development of strategies and actions that support positive parenting, based on a communitarian and systemic logic, aiming at:

• Developing local plans for the promotion and protection of the rights of children and young people that involve the participation of children and young people themselves, in order to ensure the existence of supporting strategies to an evidence-based responsible and positive parenthood;
• Enhancing the involvement and the active participation of children and young people in the development, monitoring and execution of the aforementioned local plans;
• Enhancing the intervention of the entities with competences in matters of childhood and youth and of the local commissions for the protection of children and young people through the training and specialization of their professionals for the promotion of a more protective parenthood, while qualifying their intervention with the families towards the effective prevention of situations of risk and/or danger; and
• Promoting the training of the families regarding the exercise of a responsible parenthood in the different dimensions of family life, improving parental performance while effectively fulfilling the rights and the protection of children and young people.

Implementation period

The Protective Seal Project helps entities with competences on matters of childhood and youth to pursue their attributions, as set forth in article 7 of Law for the Protection of Children and Young People in Danger (Law No. 147/99, of September 1 and subsequent amendments). It allows professionals of the aforementioned entities to improve their practice, since these institutions act at the most informal level of the system of promotion of the rights and protection of children and young people. The Protective Seal Project is inspired in tested national and international experiences, particularly in the Australian The Blue Card System, and is designed to provide information and guidance to institutions that work with children and young people, namely in the development and implementation of a risk management strategy.

The “Protective Organization” distinction is valid for two years and is awarded in result of a selection process of applications submitted by the entities. It reflects the latter’s commitment towards the implementation of public policies and practices that promote the rights of the child by fulfilling eight requirements related to the existence and implementation of: a Declaration of Commitment; a Code of Conduct; specific procedures for recruitment, selection and training of employees; a strategic plan for the promotion of the rights and the protection of children and young people; a plan to manage high-risk activities; policies and procedures for referral and management of maltreatment situations; a strategic plan for communication and collaboration; and a coordination team for the integrated system for the management of risk and danger.

Other participant entities
National Commission for the Promotion of Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People (PT)

Beneficiaries
Children and young people, decision makers, rulers, governmental entities and the civil society of Portugal and of the European Union in general

Short description
This consultation session with children and young people integrated the public consultation carried out by Portugal, as a Member State of the European Union, to public and private entities in order to gather contributions for the elaboration of an Action Plan for the implementation of the 20 principles established in the European Pillar of Social Rights (EPSR), seizing upon the opportunity of the establishment of the National Council for Children and Young People (CNCJ), in 2020, to obtain the perspective and contribution of its members on this matter of European and national decision.
The methodology included prior reflection and debate on the EPSR and the principles that sustain it, in the context of a meeting of the CNCJ that involved about half of its 103 Counselors, organized in different groups, each group dedicated to discussing issues associated with each principle of the EPSR and possible actions to develop for its future implementation.
The conclusions of this previous session were presented at the public consultation session with children and young people by 15 representatives of the CNCJ: eight girls and seven boys – one of which with disabilities – aged between 8 and 17, from all regions of Portugal, namely: North, Centre, Lisbon and Tagus Valley, Alentejo, Algarve, Autonomous Region of the Azores and Autonomous Region of Madeira.
In a first phase, the process of selecting the representatives was based on the voluntary manifestation of the Counselors’ availability to participate; in a second phase, and due to the high number of volunteers, the selection process was based on the need to ensure a balance of geographical representation, age and gender balance of the final set of representatives.

Implementation period
The public session was held on November 4, 2020; a previous preparation session for reflection and debate was organized.

Results achieved
Consultation held with the National Council of Children and Young People, which resulted in the preparation of a document by the National Commission for the Promotion of the Rights and Protection of Children and Young People containing the views and proposals of children and youth for the Plan of Action aimed at implementing the European Pillar of Social Rights. This document was transmitted to the Office for Strategy and Planning of the Ministry of Labor, Solidarity and Social Security for consolidation in a document that integrated the results of the public consultation carried out with other sectors of society, for subsequent sharing within the European Union, in the context of this sectoral area.

Survey “Experience from Children and Young People living in Residential Care”

Coordinating entity
Agency for Child and Family Welfare of the City of Oslo (NO)

Other participant entities
Children and young people

Beneficiaries
Institutionalized children and young people and residential care institutions.

Short description
This action aims to create services that meet the needs of all children and young people, as well as measures that take into account the needs of a single child while ensuring a professionally sound whole. As such, and since it is a prerequisite that the Agency actively acquires the knowledge and experience of children and young people in the development of service provision, the promotion of the Agency’s initiatives will build precisely on knowledge provided by children and young people, experience from the services and research knowledge.

Children and young people’s voices should be heard and emphasized before decisions are made. All processes must be reviewed and quality assured to ensure that children and young people are safe and able to speak in safe spaces. Based on this recognition of children and young people, the Agency has decided that the alignment of the work of the whole organization is paramount to implement basic assumptions. Thus, the Agency places cooperation with children and young people at the basis of all the work to be done ahead, while developing organizational anchored structures that do not depend on people’s individual initiative for measures to be taken and changes to happen, here and now, and in relation to a defined target group.

Children and young people should experience a child welfare that is safe, useful and cooperative from their point of view. As such, in 2019, the Norwegian Child and Family Administration conducted two experience surveys, which were sent to children and young people from Oslo municipality who lived or were living in a child welfare institution, in order to gather valuable knowledge about areas of improvement to be developed in cooperation with children and young people, while learning more about their experience. This will simultaneously allow to have children and young people in institutions being met by safe, caring and competent adults and to have the former becoming real partners in the development of measures that will affect them.

Results achieved

The survey was sent out to 95 children and adolescents, 47 of which lived in municipal institutions and 48 under measures provided by the Norwegian Child and Family Administration during the period the survey was ongoing. The survey received a response rate of 30.5%, which allows an insight and increased understanding of the children’s subjective immediate experience, but not drawing general assumptions or conclusions about the condition and situation of children and young people in institutions.

The analysis and interpretation of the results turned into several recommendations drawn by the working group, including that the institutions:

- Maintain and continue focusing on the need of children and young people to meet safe and caring adults, who are available and listen to what they want to express, which involves a focus on how institutions should be able to accommodate and recognise the different feelings of children and young people, as well as safeguarding children and young people when they are not well;
- Continue to work to facilitate and adapt to make it safe for children and young people to share their opinions and views, namely with adults in whom the children confide;
- Work together and talk to all children and young people to highlight how to meet children’s needs, being desirable that a common understanding exists among children and adults regarding what entails caring and how to show care in a way that is recognised as such by children and young people;
- Along with the child welfare service, must have good systems that grasp the way information of children and young people is provided, guaranteeing that documents show how children and young people have understood and perceived the conveyed information; and
- Keep a focus on safeguarding children and young people whose time of residence in the institution has not been clarified.

Together for Children, Young People and Families

Coordinating entity
Agency for Child and Family Welfare of the City of Oslo (NO)

Other participant entities
Children, young people, environmental therapists, and leaders

Beneficiaries
Institutionalized children and young people, residential care institutions

Short description
This action aims to create services that meet the needs of all children and young people, as well as measures that take into account the needs of a single child while ensuring a professionally sound whole. As such, and since it is a prerequisite that the Agency actively acquires the knowledge and experience of children and young people in the development of service provision, the promotion of the Agency’s initiatives will build precisely on knowledge provided by children and young people, experience from the services and research knowledge.

Children and young people’s voices should be heard and emphasized before decisions are made. All processes must be reviewed and quality assured to ensure that children and young people are safe and able to speak in safe spaces. Based on this recognition of children and young people, the Agency has decided that the alignment of the work of the whole organization is paramount to implement basic assumptions. Thus, the Agency puts cooperation with children and young people at the basis of all the work to be done ahead, while developing organizational anchored structures that do not depend on people’s individual initiative for measures to be taken and changes to happen, here and now, and in relation to a defined target group.

In this regard, a set of guidelines for good practice examples of how to collaborate with children and young people at a structural level when living in an institution was prepared by children/young people, environmental therapists and leaders in various workshops.

In order to ensure that the right of children to participate and the right to receive adequate and customized information are facilitated and safeguarded, several focus areas have been addressed, namely regarding the adaptation of the environmental therapeutic work according to individual assessments of the child’s best interests. Those areas included:

- Facilitating and adapting content information to be provided to children and young people and how it is delivered;
- Collecting children and young people’s views, opinions and experiences in a safe environment;
- Highlighting the way children and young people’s views are taken in due account in matters that concern them;
- Facilitating children and young people’s participation in the preparation of action plans;
- Facilitating children and young people information and knowledge of what is written in log notes and period summaries;
- Facilitating children and young people’s participation in the preparation of reports; and
- Documenting the input and knowledge of children and young people that contributes to the development and improvement of the services offered by the institution.

Implementation period
Ongoing since 2019
Results achieved

Currently, there is no enough evidence yet as to whether the implemented measures are being positively experienced by the children, since future research will be carried out to ascertain this particular aspect.

Ung Arena – A Model Decryption of a Way of Working with Youth

Coordinating entity
Oslo Commune, Gamle Oslo District (NO)

Other participant entities
The County Governor of Oslo and Viken

Beneficiaries
Young people aged between 12 and 25, with outbreaks related to mental health, intoxication and violence

Short description
Ung Arena (Young Arena) is a municipal low-threshold service free of charge for youngsters who use the facilities. The target group are young children aged between 12 and 25 years who may have or might have had mental health and substance abuse issues.

The service has been developed in collaboration with young people and is provided based on the needs of the young people. Ung Arena’s service is flexible and includes drop-in calls, follow-up on a daily basis, practical help and contact via social media, among others. For children and young people, Young Arena is described as “a place where you can come and talk about what you have on your mind”.

The Ung Arena model is based on a solid knowledge support and is in line with research and political guidelines and strategies that emphasize the value of early intervention, a need for better coordination of existing services, as well as the importance of easily accessible services for young people to make use of them. The children and young people’s own needs and desires are at the centre of the attention, which therefore strongly emphasizes the participation of young people in the development of the service.

Since poor services also result from little influence young people exert on how the services should be, Ung Arena has one governing principle: that users should have great influence on the service provided. In order to be an inclusive service for all youths who need someone to talk to, Ung Arena wants to help reduce the stigma that may be attached to mental health care.

Implementation period
Ongoing since 2015, when Gamle Oslo District and the County Governor of Oslo and Viken cooperated on the establishment of a low-threshold service for children and young people with a focus on mental health and substance abuse.

Results achieved
The County Governor contributed to the development of the service and with financial support. Gamle Oslo District collaborated with an organisation called Mental Health to get users’ insights and wishes included in the new service. A study trip was carried out to Denmark to learn about an Australian model called Headspace. Several workshops were conducted with local youth focusing on youth-friendly service design and with the intention to develop one’s own model adapted to Norwegian young people. Experiences from Ung Arena centres show that the themes that young people address therein includes issues related to: mental difficulties, loneliness, depression, conflict, difficult life situations, housing, anxiety, trauma, violence/abuse, drugs sub-problems, school dropouts, bullying, eating disorders and uncertainty about sexuality/sexual health.

Workshops with the participation of children regarding child participation in age assessment procedures

Coordinating entity
National Commission for the Promotion of Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People (PT)

Other participant entities
AKTO – Human Rights and Democracy, Casa Pia de Lisboa, COI Foundation, High Commission for Migrations, Portuguese Refugee Council and Santa Casa da Misericórdia de Lisboa,

Beneficiaries
Refugee and migrant children and children involved in situations in which age assessment procedures are legally required, including victims of trafficking in human beings, children under international protection, non-accompanied and undocumented children or holders of invalid documents.

Short description
Funded by the Council of Europe, the workshops were organized and documents were produced in full respect for the principles enshrined in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and according to specific orientations of the Council of Europe on the protection of children’s rights.

The workshops were carried out in child-friendly environments. Child-friendly materials and language were used by the facilitators, including Portuguese sign language, in order to meet the special needs of children with disabilities and allow participation on an equal opportunities basis.

Implementation period
In 2018, the application was submitted and approved, materials were prepared and meetings with facilitators were held. The workshops took place during January 2019.

Results achieved
Four editions of the workshops were held – three in Lisbon and one in Coimbra –, in order to gather the views of children of different age groups, genders, ethnic origins and nationalities and children with disabilities. The results of the workshops were included in the Council of Europe’s report “We are children, hear us out!”. It was ascertained that children were provided very scarce information on what is the process of age assessment and its objectives, as well as regarding their rights and what they mean. Therefore, the National Commission decided to submit to the Council of Europe a new application for the development of an informative brochure in child-friendly language.

PART III – Acknowledgements

The National Commission for the Promotion of Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People (Portugal) and the Agency for Child and Family Welfare of the City of Oslo (Norway) would like to thank the EEA Grants/Fund for Bilateral Relations for having financed this bilateral initiative, as well as to all the entities in Portugal and in Norway - and their respective representatives - that accepted our invitation to participate in this initiative’s activities along its implementation period. They were our direct sources and their cooperation was very enriching, namely:

- Casa Pia de Lisboa, I.P. (Portugal)
- Center for Judicial Studies (Portugal)
- Center for Studies for Social Intervention (Portugal)
- Commission for Citizenship and Gender Equality (Portugal)
- Directorate for Children, Youth and Family Affairs (Norway)
- Directorate-General for Education (Portugal)
- Directorate-General for Health (Portugal)
- Directorate-General for Reintegration and Prison Services (Portugal)
- High Commission for Migration (Portugal)
- National Institute of Legal Medicine and Forensic Sciences (Portugal)
- National Republican Guard (Portugal)
- Ministry of Children and Families (Norway)
- Ministry of Local Government and Modernization (Norway)
The National Commission for the Promotion of Rights and the Protection of Children and Young People and the Agency for Child and Family Welfare of the City of Oslo would like to specially thank the children and young people in Portugal and in Norway, who enriched us and this initiative with their voices and views, through their involvement in the activities of this bilateral initiative. Better than any entity or adult, they know how they feel and live the promotion and protection of their rights in each context and moment. Their opinions and suggestions offer the most accurate views on the reality which is their own. They are the focus of our mission – the promotion of rights and the protection of children and young people – and, together with them, we learned not only how to protect them and promote their rights better, but also how to make them feel protected, take their opinions into account, ensure they are actually heard by adults and institutions and have an active contribution to policy and decision-making. Children are the ones who can teach us better how to do better in all areas, in all children’s best interests.
ANNEX I

Children’s Voices

Introductory Note

The following content reflects written and spoken thoughts and opinions of children who expressed themselves on the occasion of their participation in thematic workshops and parallel events carried out in the course of the bilateral initiative “Enhancing the protection of the rights of the child in priority areas” and in reply to an anonymous questionnaire disseminated in this context.

It is a collection of expressions and sentences in children’s own words, whose enriching content must be incorporated and highlighted in this Referential of Good Practices. Organized according to the main themes in which they are focused on, these contributions address important questions and provide clear hints that will certainly add to enhancing the protection of children’s rights in priority areas, including child participation.

Our deep appreciation towards their generous contribution is, thus, hereby expressed.

• Friendship; to talk to friends; to be with friends; to have fun with friends; union with family and friends

• To be loved; to feel loved; to feel loved by someone; to be with someone we love; to need someone and to love; to feel good with someone
... WHAT MAKES YOU THINK CHILDREN ARE VULNERABLE?

- Children depend on adults
- Children are innocent and are still learning how to deal with their responsibilities
- Not all children know their rights
- Because children feel several feelings at the same time and don’t know how to deal with those emotions
- Children are not mature and are too sensitive
- Intuition
- Children don’t know how to solve their own problems
- Children are not as strong as adults and sometimes they don’t know which are adults’ intentions
- Children offend each other without thinking they are doing it
- Because, even if parents are responsible, parents are humans and do mistakes that in some way may affect children’s life
- Children are always more fragile amidst the society
- Children don’t talk much to each other and don’t listen to each other
- Children may be going through difficult moments of their life and feel vulnerable
- Sometimes adults don’t care about what children think
- Children are not heard enough and, sometimes, when they are, their opinions are not taken seriously by adults
- Children take things too seriously
- Things that happen to them are not their fault
- Some adults and other children make some children feel frightened, bullied or live violence situations at home or at school
- Not only adults suffer discrimination, violence, illness and social problems
- Some children live in war and poverty contexts
- All people are vulnerable because they all have weaknesses and difficulties

PART B – HOW...

... HOW CAN PROFESSIONALS ENSURE THAT THE DOCUMENTS THEY PRODUCE REFLECT CHILDREN’S VIEWS?

- Let’s read through and contribute to the document
- Explain why the document is important
- Make sure we understand, don’t talk to us or talk about us
- Let children be alone when needed, children are good at hiding or holding [their views/opinions]
- [Allow] enough time, not in a rush
- Get to know the child, ask or understand what the child is comfortable with
- Watch the child, write down the opinion of the child, [use] body language, draw; make it easier for children to understand
- Interim reports, regular meetings face to face with the case manager. Require that public documents include children’s inputs
- Review the documents with children. Children can contribute to writing them, [it’s] not just having conversations about the child’s views. Write down what the child’s views are

... HOW CAN ADULTS HELP CHILDREN EXPRESS THEIR NEEDS?

- Not in an open office environment, [but with] non-transparent doors and windows. Listen and call on the phone
- Sickly flexible. Car, transport, food, needs [are] important, bus ticket, own room.
- An adult who has a relationship with the child and whom the child trusts, not necessarily the case manager. On the child’s premises, does not have to be a meeting at the office, at a set time
- Talk to us first!!
- Have time for us, time to listen, organize and let us participate
- Be a confident adult who also gives something back. Show that you care
- If we need it, let us have a representative
- Dare to ask us and listen to what we have to say
- Do it in the child’s premises. Not in a sterile office, not in the room next to the parents
...HOW CAN ADULTS MAKE IT SAFE FOR CHILDREN TO SHARE THEIR OPINIONS?

• Institutional calls with primary contact at the institution, at least once a month
• Too much information is not good information. Information is not provided until it is understood
• Let’s talk to someone we trust
• Show that it is useful to tell
• Register the child’s view when it’s expressed. Inquire further, get involved.
• [Have] Permanent employees, frameworks, show how it should be, don’t just say it.

... HOW CAN ADULTS INCLUDE CHILDREN IN EVERYTHING THAT RELATES TO THEIR LIFE?

• Look at the child as an equal party
• Information posters, brochures. Stay around, do not push, but stay accessible
• Tell a student/new employee with posters and words

... HOW CAN SERVICES/STAKEHOLDERS ARRANGE FOR THE OPINION OF CHILDREN TO COME FORWARD AND BE ADAPTED TO CHILDREN’S AGE?

• “Use interest and use organizations”
• Listen to those who have experience before trying new things
• Care
• Cognitive function
• Networking

... HOW CAN THE WORLD BE CHANGED TO BECOME A BETTER PLACE FOR CHILDREN?

• Only children can change the world, since adults are [the ones who are] responsible for the way it is now
• Not only children should change the world, but also - and mostly - adults should; politicians and legislators should correct the mistakes that lead the world to what it is now [and left it in this condition] for the coming generations
• Fight discrimination, prejudice, hypocrisy, respect people and their rights without leaving anyone behind or excluded
• Maturity, being conscious of one’s own attitudes, internal changes, try to be happy, try to have a better life, request adults’ help when necessary
• Increase children’s participation, hear the children in all matters that respect them, have children’s opinions taken in due account, give children more rights
• End wars, violence, conflicts, bullying and confusion
• Improve living conditions of the families, increase investments, improve health, better work conditions, debate and reflect on social evolution
• Promote dialogue, debates, information, raise awareness, have people listen to each other, not being afraid of expressing emotions, feelings and opinions
• Empathy, solidarity, love, friendship, union, fighting selfishness
• Innovation, creativity, change of attitudes and perspectives, open-minded mentalities, value the world more and reduce dependence on technologies
• Determination, take action and do not only say words, change through the example, fighting laziness
• Change the existing education and end the disrespect towards teachers
